We All Deserve Justice and Respect

The issues of inequality between men and women cause large challenges at hand which are all interconnected with societies issues. The concepts of feminist theory and ideas all relate to the ideas of gender equality and justice, which advocates to end these inequalities and discrimination against women and people of color. Feminists can be anyone who fight for equal rights and justice between people across all identities. Whether that is from race, ethnicity, religion, gender, class, nationality, disability, or anything that makes a part of your identity, you are advocating for justice. With this sense, it is important to respect people even when you do not agree with them because that is fair for everyone and allows us to have equal opportunities for our well-beings.

With respect at hands, it is totally alright to not agree with everyone because we all have our own perspectives. On the contrary, it is not okay to cause violence or hate towards people you do not agree with because that does not solve problems. Feminists who are anti-men or think they are better than everyone else is of concern and should not be approaching their rights with anger. It is important to be open-minded and understand that everyone has their own life and that we all need our space to communicate with one another for our needs. The term "feminism" simply is a fight for justice and respect for all people no matter who they are.

GUYS AND GIRLS, THIS IS YOUR HERSTORY!

The term 'feminism' is a word that not everyone understands. It is simply a term that advocates justice for both men and women. It means that we all respect and love one another for who we are. It means that we as humans are treated fairly and are not abused or mistreated no matter the circumstances that life holds for us. There is no hate or violence, furthermore both men and women deserve equality in opportunities and respect as a human being.

Politics may get into many social issues and concerns within society that does cause corruptness, and all sorts of violence and hate. The important thing is to know who you are and what is true to yourself. Holding your values and knowing what you stand for is what really matters. Your identity and values make up who you are, so explore how history has changed over time and learn how to make positive change that is for a better future.

On behalf of positive change, we need to act on giving everyone the life they deserve. In the Declaration of Independence, it states that we are all ensured "Life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness". This means that everyone has the right to life in this world and have rights to make their own choices. We as humans in this society need to end all of the violence, hatred, and oppression we create on this planet by ensuring love and peace within us all that is natural to the Earth we all live on.

Know your history of feminism and societal issues so that you can take part in changing the corruptness of society and transform that into justice for all men and women. Be wise and knowledgeable in the needs of this world because our futures depend on us youth.

A Viewpoint From Women of Color

Q and A from Women and Gender Studies Major:

Why did you choose to major in Women and Gender Studies?

Interested in feminism at a young age and took it as general ed course. It is applicable to everyday life and the content was so relevant to real life. Women and gender studies are concepts and theories that are applicable.

What or who has inspired you throughout your journey as a feminist?

Mentor who protects culture and community and best friend and little sister. They inspire as they are changing with healing and love. Women of color feminists and theorists are also an inspiration.

Why do you consider yourself a feminist and what specific aspects do you feel contribute in strengthening your feminist viewpoints?

The aspects throughout a life of immigrants and life systems have made physical and emotional abuse. So, I am an abolitionist and decolonizing feminist who is anti-sexist and anti-racist for justice.

A Viewpoint From Women of Color

Q and A from Women and Gender Studies Major:

Throughout your life, how has being a woman of color impacted you as a feminist and how has it shaped your life story?

The question to black women: are you choosing the women's movement or the black movement too? The intersectionalities of women issues are important to be aware of as well.

How have you been empowered as a woman and what has motivated you to stand for women's justice?

Empowered in other spaces with other people who have done work. In this space is love, community and connections that are empowering. This is either our lives and community, or nothing.

How do you feel women have progressed throughout feminist movements and what do you think are some pros and cons?

In the U.S, California, women couldn't vote or own property, and being able to shift this has enabled us to be liberated.

Young People Willing to Make Change

Q & A

What does feminism mean to you?

"The concept that women of feminine people are equal to men and masculine figures."

I think a lot of feminists preach that feminine people are better than men and call that feminism which is wrong because feminism is about showing how feminine people are equal to everyone else without belittling the other gender.

"Empowering women and acknowledging all women's rights"

What do you know about feminism?

"People have been fighting with it for a long time and it unites women and feminine figures together."

How has your identity (race, ethnicity, gender) impacted your roles in society? What are some specific examples/encounters of societal struggles?

Since my ethnicity, in the US, is a minority it gives me the role to educate a lot of people in my community about my culture. An example of societal struggle for me is stereotypes for middle eastern and the fact that there aren't many people in my community who have the same cultural morals as me or my culture.

I think one of the most looked down upon identities in society is women of color because not only are they of color which is a minority itself but they are also women so they are seen as weak. This causes them to not be given chances and opportunities just because of the way they look.

What does it mean to be empowered as a woman and how can we as young women empower one another?

"To empower women means to give them opportunities to hold all kinds of positions in society as opposed to assigning women specific roles based on their gender."

To know that you have the same abilities and potential as everyone else, and encouraging the future generation to grow up without the stigma around empowered women.
